SECTION 4 - TERMS OF REFERENCE (Note 3)

4.1 - General

4.1.1 Project Description

Conservation-restoration works will be carried out on seven large-format canvas paintings, painted during the 17th century. The artworks depict: (1) The Immaculate Conception; (2) The Birth of Our Lady; (3) The Presentation of Our Lady in the Temple; (4) The Annunciation; (5) The Visitation of Our Lady to St Elisabeth; (6) The Presentation of Our Lord (The Circumcision); and (7) The Assumption of Our Lady. All paintings are currently displayed inside the Oratory of the Immaculate Conception within the Church of the Jesuits in Valletta, Malta.

History

The artefacts earmarked for this conservation-restoration project were executed during the seventeenth century that, based on stylistic ground, can be attributed to a collaborative work by Stefano Erardi and Filippo Dingli, two important Maltese artists. The artworks were commissioned specifically for the Oratory of the Immaculate Conception within the Church of the Jesuits in Valletta, Malta.

All artworks underwent past treatments to address damages and deterioration. Apart from restoration and conservation treatment, the painting titled "The Presentation of Our Lady in the Temple" was also cut to accommodate a wooden pulpit.

General current state of the paintings

The paintings are significantly soiled and their varnish has yellowed and darkened. The original paint has cracked and detachments was detected on several paintings. Both old and more recent paint losses were also observed. Retouching applied during past treatments have also discoloured and darkened. Such alteration also occurred to the over-paint (non-original paint covering the original). Additional past damages include punctures and tears. The adhesion of non-original textile to the reverse side of paintings during past treatments - such as lining and patches - are presenting further problems that include local deformations of the original paint and canvas support. Several auxiliary frames - both strainer and stretcher frames - are still functional, although several manifest weakening and inadequate past interventions. A significant portion of the painting titled "The Presentation of Our Lady in the Temple" is missing. The latter, caused by a past intervention, has weakened the strainer frame and permitted the canvas painting to deform after losing its tautness.

Prior to initiating the conservation-restoration intervention of the paintings and their respective decorative frames, an in-depth condition assessment report including scientific analysis and detailed photographic documentation is required. This is to be followed by a detailed Preliminary Treatment Proposal that clearly mentions and justifies the treatment methodology intended for these artworks. The proposal shall mention: the specific conservation and restoration materials; clear description of each treatment; and a risk assessment.

An overall review of the current condition of the paintings and their decorative frames follows:

4.1.2 Geographical Area to be covered

The paintings are located in the Oratory of the Immaculate Conception within the Church of the Jesuits in Valletta, Malta.

4.1.3 Target Groups

Target groups are conservators-restorers that are in possession of: (1) a Maltese warrant specialised in the treatment of canvas paintings; and (2) at least MQF Level 6 in the Conservation and Restoration of Canvas Paintings.

4.2 - Specific Activities

The warranted and qualified conservator-restorer carrying out the works related to this contract is responsible for the preparation of all scientific analysis, documentation, specifications and photographic images compiled in an Inception Report for each painting.

The detailed inception report is to include: a historical background; results obtained through scientific analysis; the manufacturing technique; an in-depth condition assessment for each artefact; treatment proposals (indicating the materials to be used - such as consolidants, solvents, etc); and related documentation and photographic documentation for the eight paintings. Such report will have the necessary EU publicity requirements which will be communicated to the Contractor by the Contracting Authority. This report must be approved prior starting conservation and restoration treatment by the Representative appointed by the Contracting Authority who will be in-charge of the project, and is to be modified by the conservator-restorer as many times necessary until it is fully approved by the project representative.

Once the conservation-restoration works are finalised, the conservator-restorer is to compile a final report for each painting. The reports shall explain and justify the entire conservation and restoration process, including the materials used. The documents have to present recommendations on the preventive conservations measures and monitoring guidelines to safeguard the artefacts after treatment. Such report will have the necessary EU publicity requirements which will be communicated to the Contractor by the Contracting Authority.

The sequence of how all the paintings for this contract are to be worked upon and completed is to be instructed by the Contracting Authority in order to ensure compliance with the Church calendar function requirements. The Contractor is to strictly follow this sequence provided that the completion period for this contract of a maximum of 52 weeks from contract commencement, is respected. A Programme of Works is to be provided indicating how the different tasks will be carried out keeping in mind the total duration of a maximum of 52 weeks from commencement of the contract as specified in Article 1.3 of the ITT and Article 18.1 of the Special Conditions.

Method statement

The state of conservation report for the Oratory's paintings is provided in the annex of this tender document.

The conservation-restoration of these artefacts will not be carried out within the Church of the Jesuits but will be treated inside a conservation and restoration laboratory/studio equipped with the necessary equipment and facilities. Therefore, in order to decrease further damage during dismantling and transportation, on-site precautions, such as facing, may be considered. Small scaffolding may be utilised to facilitate handling and reduce damaging risks whilst bringing down the paintings. The paintings need to be packed, handled with care, and transported in a vertical position inside a close vehicle. The sequence of how the paintings will be worked upon and completed will be instructed by the Contracting Authority and carried out within the specified maximum period of 52 weeks from contract commencement.

Prior commencing treatment, the contractor has to provide the project representative with a detailed preliminary report. This report shall include a condition assessment and treatment proposal for approval by the project representative. The contractor cannot commence conservation and restoration treatment before receiving approval (in writing) by the project representative. It is necessary to compile a preliminary report for each artwork. The said report shall include professional documentation in diffused light, raking light, ultraviolet fluorescence, and ideally near-infrared or false-colour infra-red. Treatment proposals shall clearly specify all the materials and techniques intended for each treatment. The report should ideally be based on preliminary investigations and findings from scientific analysis. Scientific analysis - such as stratigraphy of the paint layers; identification of the paintings' constituent materials; identification of non-original materials; and the analysis of degradation processes - are encouraged and could be requested by the project representative. Such analysis is intended to better understand the artwork and its alterations, as well in order to better plan the treatment methodology.

If active insect infestation is detected, the artworks need to be treated by anoxia for at least one-month duration. Moreover, the contractor is expected to inspect the artwork's displaying location within the church for signs of biodeteriogens. All the necessary measures should be considered by the contractor in order to ensure that the artwork will not be re-subjected to biodeteration after treatment.

Following approval from the project representative, the contractor shall start by cleaning the surface of artworks to remove soiling, avoiding commercial cleaning products. Eventually, the contractor must conduct small but representative preliminary tests on each artwork to remove yellowed varnish and non-original paint. The contractor shall only make use of materials and methods that have been tested and approved in conservation literature by authoritative authors and institutions. Materials and methods have to be tailor-made by the contractor for each artwork. Commercial, ready-made cleaning products containing undeclared materials shall be avoided at all costs due to the product's unknown properties, residues and long-term impact to the artworks' state of conservation.

The said cleaning tests and their findings have to be demonstrated to the project representative for approval before continuing treatment. Whenever the contractor observes the necessity of altering the choice of materials and treatment methodology, the contractor must clearly inform the project representative and seek his/her approval (in writing) for every single amendment. The project representative deserves the right of halting and revising the project upon noting the use of undeclared and/or unapproved materials and treatments.

All the proposed materials used during intervention shall be approved by the project representative as it is necessary to ensure that all the proposed materials are use for conservation and restoration treatment: stability (durability); reversibility; compatibility with the original paintings' constituent materials; re-treatability; and shall not pose new deterioration risks or increase the paintings' rate of deterioration.

Tests to establish the most appropriate treatment and materials for the delining and/or removal of patches and adhesive of every artwork shall be discussed and approved by the project representative. The use of excessive water and physical abrasion shall be avoided not to cause permanent damage to the artworks.

Canvas deformations have to be reduced with the controlled application of moisture, pressure and/or heat. The same applies for paint deformations. These treatments have to be executed with great care and moderation not to risk losing the original brushwork texture of the original.

Partly detached paint shall be re-adhered (back to its original location) to the canvas support using stable and reversible adhesive(s) approved for conservation use. The application of additional adhesive or consolidants from the painting's reverse side should be avoided if possible as its reversibility will be compromised once absorbed by the original canvas support.

Where applicable, local or general facing - using acid-free Japanese paper adhered with a conservation-grade material - can be considered to temporarily protect the paint layer during treatment. Facing is considered when the original paint layer is at risk of damage during treatment.

Canvas lacunae must be inlayed using 100% linen canvas that fits precisely within the loss and its weave orientation should match with the original. Paint lacunae shall be only filled with an inert (consisting of either calcium carbonate or hydrated gypsum) and bound with gelatine. Commercial ready-made fillers shall be avoided due to their: undeclared constituent materials; unknown chemical and physical stability; and unknown reversibility and re-treatability.

Minute canvas losses - such as those caused by past insect infestations - can be filled using known materials that are approved for conservation.

Lining (or re-lining) can be carried out only for the paintings that have extensive tears, reoccurring local deformations, and highly degraded (fragile) canvas support. The lining canvas shall consist either of 100% linen or 100% polyester that is specifically manufactured and supplied for the lining of paintings. The lining adhesive should be approved for conservation. Moreover, the adhesive shall be easily reversed without posing risks to the artwork. It should be ensured that the lining canvas is sufficiently and evenly adhered to the original support without manifesting deformations.

If, after delining, it is observed that the original canvas support is still flexible and still capable of keeping the painting taut, re-lining should be avoided due to reversibility and possible long-term impact to the paintings' state of conservation. Tears and punctures can be re-adhered with local application of adhesive, tread-by-tread treatment, and/or patches. Patches shall be carried out using the thinnest and most stable material possible that could keep the tears from re-opening whilst keeping the painting taut. In addition, when avoiding lining (or re-lining), the paintings should be strip-lined using linen canvas. The perimeter of both patches and strip-lining canvas shall be frayed to limit future local deformations to the artwork.

The preservation or replacement of the paintings' auxiliary frames shall be discussed with the project's representative. Every effort shall be considered to preserve original auxiliary frames. The joinery of original strainer frames can be reinforced and additional crossbars could be considered. Bevelled wooden strips can be added along the frame's outer margin to limit further strainer marks to the painting. If, however, it is observed that an original auxiliary frame needs to be replaced, it is important to manufacture a new stretcher frame that can retain the painting taut and free from deformations. Newly-manufactured frames need to be manufactured using only Tulip Wood featuring bevelled members, sufficient crossbars, and stainless-steel expandable bolts.

The paintings that are mounted on non-original stretcher frames can either be repaired, although in most cases they necessitate their replacement with newly-manufactured frames featuring the above-mentioned specifications.

Retouching need to be carried out following conservation ethics. Every paint lacunae shall be retouched by matching the hues and tonalities of the original, whilst permitting viewers to identify the retouched area from a close inspection. The latter can be achieved either by retouching paint losses with extremely fine dots (referred to as puntini) or in fine hatching (referred to as tratteggio, tratteggio spezzato, or selezione cromatica). Reconstructions are highly discouraged and neutral integration may be considered where necessary, still following the said retouching techniques. Retouching paint can either consist of artists-grade watercolour and/or varnish-based paint approved for conservation and restoration interventions by the conservation international community and by reputable conservation institutes. The contractor shall contact the project representative during the earliest stages of the retouching process and seek the representative's approval before continuing. The project representative deserves the right of refusing retouching applied in solid colour or if executed imprecisely in uneven dots or broad lines that remain clearly noticeable from 0.5 to 1 meters away from the artwork. The extent of retouching will be discussed and the minimal possible extent will be approved in order to present the authentic, original quality of the artwork. Repainting and visual alterations to the original - referred to as over-painting - will not be accepted and the contractor will be ordered to remove and amend the works until reaching a result that is deemed satisfactory by the project representative.

A permanent backing material shall be applied to the reverse side of each artwork. This backing needs to be composed of canvas composed of either: (a) non-woven or densely-woven 100% polyester; or (b) densely-woven 100% linen. The polyester canvas has to be approved for conservation and restoration and shall cover the entire reverse side of the artwork. This backing, composed of a stable and lightweight material, is mainly intended to protect the reverse side of the paintings from dust. It is necessary that the backing canvas remains taut and free from deformations. The backing should only be attached to the reverse side of the paintings' auxiliary frame in a reversible manner to facilitate future inspections (such as with the use of Velcro strips) and to ensure that the backing will be kept distanced from the canvas support of the painting.

Following the conservation-restoration treatments, all the artefacts are to be installed into their original position. All paintings have gilt wooden frames that also need to be treated and the missing parts have to be reconstructed. The latter gilt wooden strips shall not be adhered to the painting. Instead, the wooden strips shall be only adhered to the wall using long stainless steel screws that can be removed with ease. The fixed wooden strips should secure the paintings in their original location. It is recommended to line the reverse side of the wooden strips with soft cotton textile in order to limit the wood from abrading the artworks' paint layer.

Several paintings of this Oratory fit exactly into their respective wall recess. Hence it must be ensured that all paintings will fit without any difficulty after conservation and restoration treatment. For this reason it is important, for instance, to ensure that the original dimensions including the thickness/depth of each artwork should be respected and unaltered. The latter applies, for instance, to: (1) repairs and modifications to the original strainer frame; (2) manufacturing of new stretcher frames to replace the original; and (3) presence of excess lining canvas and strip-lining canvas along the tacking margins and on the paintings' reverse sides. The conservator(s) may inspect the paintings' original location and take measurements if necessary to ensure that no problems arise during the re-installation of the artworks.

The painting titled "The Presentation of Our Lady in the Temple" requires the modification of the existing frame, or the manufacturing of a new stretcher frame. The latter frame shall follow the cut bottom perimeter of the painting (that has an arched outline) to ensure that: (1) the canvas painting remain adequately taut and free from deformations; and (2) the painting fits back inside its wall recess whilst accommodating the wooden pulpit present beneath this painting.

The tasks assigned through this contract must adhere to the implementation time frames stipulated in Article 1.3 of the ITT and Article 18.1 of the Special Conditions.

Upon completion of the tasks assigned through this contract, the Contractor will provide a detailed conservation report. This report shall include: scientific analysis; documentation; historical background; detailed insight of the paintings' manufacturing technique; current state of conservation; past treatments; detailed explanation and justification of every conservation and restoration treatment; and preventive conservations measures recommended for the preservation and maintenance of both artefacts after treatment. Such report will have the necessary EU publicity requirements which will be communicated to the Contractor by the Contracting Authority.
